PREFACE

This report presents statistics on the number of inhabitants of the State, its counties, and minor civil divisions (townships, New England towns, etc.). In addition, separate figures are also presented for urban places, wards of cities of 5,000 or more, and other areas of the State. These data are based upon tabulations from the Seventeenth Decennial Census of the population of the United States, its Territories, and possessions conducted as of April 1, 1950. Provision for the Seventeenth Decennial Census was made in the act providing for the Fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses which was approved on June 18, 1929.

The major portion of the information compiled from the Census of Population of 1950 will appear in Volume I, Number of Inhabitants, and in Volume II, Characteristics of the Population. This report is a preprint of Chapter 19 (Maine) of Volume I, which is to present, in a single publication, statistics on the number of inhabitants for each State.

The materials presented here will also appear as Chapter A of Part 19 (Maine) of Volume II. Volume II will comprise a series of separately published parts, one for each State and a summary for the United States. The use of separate parts makes the basic materials on characteristics of the population for a given State available to the public in a single publication. Within the part for a State, Chapter A will recapitulate the statistics on the number and distribution of the population within a State; Chapter B will present statistics on the general characteristics of the population of the various political subdivisions of the State, such as counties, incorporated places, and the like; and Chapter C will present data on the detailed characteristics of the population of the larger areas within the State, such as cities of 100,000 inhabitants or more and standard metropolitan areas.

The materials presented here were prepared under the supervision of Howard G. Brunsman, Chief, Population and Housing Division, and Dr. Henry S. Shryock, Jr., Assistant Chief for Population Statistics, by Dr. Henry D. Sheldon, Chief, Demographic Statistics Section, Norman Lawrence, Chief, Population-Distribution Unit, and Charles P. Brinkman; the compilation of the statistics was under the direction of Robert B. Voight, Assistant Chief for Operations. The collection of the information on which these statistics are based was under the supervision of Lowell T. Galt, Chief, Field Division. The geographic work, including the delineation of special types of urban territory and the preparation of maps, was under the supervision of Clarence E. Batschelet, Chief, Geography Division.

Number of Inhabitants

The State.—Maine, originally a part of Massachusetts, was admitted to the Union in 1820 as the twenty-third State. Its population on April 1, 1950, according to the Seventeenth Census, was 913,774. The State has a land area of 31,040 square miles. In 1950 there was an average of 29.4 inhabitants per square mile as compared with an average of 27.3 in 1940. Among the States, Maine ranked thirty-fifth in population and thirty-eighth in land area.

In 1790 the area which later formed the State of Maine had a population of 96,540 (table 1). In 1950, 160 years later, its population was almost 9½ times as large. Between 1790 and 1860, the State grew rapidly. After a slight decline in the decade 1860 to 1870, the population growth was resumed, but always at a rate below the national average. In the twentieth century, the intercensal rates of growth varied from a low of 3.5 to a high of 7.9 percent. In 1900 the population of the State was 694,466, and in 1940 it was 847,226. The increase of 66,548 between 1940 and 1950 was the largest numerical 10-year gain since that experienced in the decade 1830 to 1840.

Usual place of residence.—According to usual Census practice, which dates back to 1790, each person enumerated in the 1950 Census was counted as an inhabitant of his usual place of residence or usual place of abode, which is generally construed to mean the place where he lives and sleeps most of the time. This place is not necessarily the same as his legal residence, voting residence, or domicile, although, in the vast majority of cases, these different bases of classification would be identical.

In the application of this rule, persons were not always counted as residents of the places in which they happened to be found by the census enumerators. Persons in places where guests usually pay for quarters (hotels, etc.) were enumerated on the night of April 11, and those whose usual place of residence was elsewhere were allocated to their homes. Visitors found staying in private homes, however, were not ordinarily interviewed there. Information on persons away from their usual place of residence was obtained from other members of their families, landladies, etc. If an entire family was expected to be away during the whole period of the enumeration, information on it was obtained from neighbors. A matching process was used to eliminate duplicate reports for persons who reported for themselves while away and were also reported by their families at home.

Persons in the armed forces quartered on military installations were enumerated as residents of the States, counties, and minor civil divisions in which their installations were located. Members of their families were enumerated where they actually resided. In the 1950 Census, college students living away from home were considered residents of the communities in which they were residing while attending college, rather than as persons temporarily absent from their parental homes as was the practice in 1940. In 1950 the crews of vessels of the American Merchant Marine in harbors of the United States were counted as part of the population of the ports in which their vessels were berthed on April 1, 1950. In 1940 such persons were treated as part of the population of the port from which the vessel operated. Inmates of institutions, who ordinarily live there for long periods of time, were counted as inhabitants of the place in which the institution was located; whereas patients in general hospitals, who ordinarily have short stays, were counted at, or allocated to, their homes. All persons without a usual place of residence were counted where they were enumerated.

Urban and rural population.—The 1950 urban population comprised 472,000 persons, or 51.7 percent of the total population of the State (table 1). This population was found in the 50 urban places in the State and in the urban fringe of Portland. There were 350,426 persons living in the 21 incorporated urban places, 119,859 in the 29 unincorporated urban places, and 1,715 in that part of the urban fringe of Portland outside of incorporated places. Nearly 64 percent of the urban population of the State was to be found in the 12 urban places of 10,000 or more (table 2). The largest of these, Portland, had a population of 77,634.

The rural population of Maine comprised 441,774 persons, or 48.3 percent of the total population of the State (table 1). Of the rural population, 67,043 persons, or 15.2 percent, were living in the 44 unincorporated places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants (table 2).

Urban definition.—Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,<sup>1</sup> and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the 1950 urban definition, the urban population of Maine included the following components: (a) The 350,426 inhabitants of the 21 incorporated places of 2,500 or more; (b) the 24,081 inhabitants of the 5 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 or more which were also urban under special rule according to the old definition; (c) the 95,778 inhabitants of the 24 specially delineated unincorporated places which were not urban under special rule; and (d) the 1,715 persons living in unincorporated territory in the urban fringe of Portland. Since the first two elements comprise the urban population under the old urban definition, the aggregate population of the remaining elements—97,493—represents the net gain in urban population which resulted from the change in definition.

Although the Bureau of the Census has employed other definitions in the course of its history, the statistics on the population by urban and rural residence for the years 1790 to 1940 are shown in accordance with the 1940 definition. The 1950 statistics are shown in accordance with both the new and old definitions.

Trends of urban and rural population.—Trends in the urban and rural population can be examined only on the basis of the old definition. On that basis, the urban population rose from 232,827 in 1900 to 374,507 in 1950. The largest numerical increase and the most rapid rate of growth in the urban population came in the decade 1910 to 1920, when the urban population rose 37,321, or 14.2 percent. For the decade 1940 to 1950, the increase was 31,450, or 9.2 percent. In 1900, 33.5 percent of the population of the State was urban, whereas by 1950 the corresponding percentage was 41.0 (table 1).

The rural population of Maine also gained over the 50-year period, increasing from 461,639 in 1900 to 539,267 in 1950 according to the old definition. The largest numerical increase, as well as the most rapid rate of growth, came in the decade 1940 to 1950, when the rural population increased by 35,098, or 7.0 percent. The proportion of the population of the State living in rural territory declined from 66.5 percent in 1900 to 59.0 percent in 1950 (table 1).

Counties.—The 16 counties in Maine range in size from Lincoln with a population of 18,004 to Cumberland with a population of 169,201. Between 1940 and 1950, 14 counties gained population and 2 lost population. Cumberland, York, and Penobscot Counties, the counties having the greatest rates of increase, amounting to 15.9, 13.3, and 11.4 percent, respectively, had more than half their population in urban territory. The two counties which lost population, Washington and Hancock, had declines of 6.8 and 1.0 percent, respectively (table 5).

Minor civil divisions.—To the primary political divisions in which counties are subdivided, the Bureau of the Census applies the general term "minor civil divisions." In Maine the minor civil divisions are cities and towns except in the more sparsely settled areas of the State where there are divisions known as plantations, townships, grants, gores, tracts, strips, surpluses, points, reservations, and one patent. In addition, there are several groups of islands not belonging to any town.

Table 6 shows statistics on the population of each county by minor civil division for the last three censuses. The population of each unincorporated place is shown in italics under the population of the town in which it is located. When an unincorporated place lies in two or more towns, the population of the several parts is shown in table 6 under the appropriate towns, and each part is designated by "part." Figures on the total population of such places are given in table 7. Unincorporated places are designated by "uninc." Changes between the 1940 and the 1950 Censuses in the boundaries of areas listed are shown in notes to table 6. For changes in boundaries prior to the 1940 Census, see reports of the Sixteenth Census (1940), Population, Vol. I, pp. 453-456, and reports of earlier censuses.

Incorporated and unincorporated places.—In 1950, Maine had a total of 21 places which were incorporated as cities and 73 unincorporated places of 1,000 or more. There were 350,426 persons living in the 21 cities and 186,902 persons living in the unincorporated places.

The only political units which are recognized as incorporated places in the 1950 Census are those which are incorporated as cities, boroughs, and villages. Political units which are called towns are also recognized as incorporated places except in the New England States, New York, and Wisconsin.

The Bureau of the Census has delineated boundaries for the thickly settled urban fringe around cities of 50,000 or more and has also delineated boundaries for unincorporated places of 1,000 or more which are densely settled population centers without corporate limits. Although there are unincorporated places within the urban fringe, it was not feasible to establish boundaries for such places and therefore they are not identified as separate places.

The count of urban places in the 1950 Census comprises all incorporated places of 2,500 or more regardless of location and unincorporated places of 2,500 or more which are located outside the urban-fringe areas. Incorporated places of less than 2,500 which lie in the urban fringe are not recognized as urban places.

Urbanized areas.—The only urbanized area in Maine is the Portland Urbanized Area, which had a population of 113,499. Of the inhabitants of the area, 77,634 were in Portland, the central city of the area, and 35,865 in its urban fringe. The urban fringe included a population of 34,150 in two cities and 1,715 in the unincorporated part (table 9).

Each urbanized area contains at least one city with 50,000 inhabitants or more in 1940 according to a special census taken since 1940, and some urbanized areas contain two or more cities of 50,000. Each urbanized area also includes the surrounding closely settled incorporated places and unincorporated areas that meet the criteria listed in the section below on "Urban fringe." Thus the territory of an urbanized area may be classified into incorporated parts and unincorporated parts (Portland Urbanized Area map).

An urbanized area also may be divided into central city or cities and urban fringe as defined below.

Central cities.—Although an urbanized area may contain more than one city of 50,000 or more, not all cities of this size are necessarily central cities. The largest city of an area is always a central city. In addition, the second and third most populous cities in the area may qualify as central cities provided they have a population of at least one-third of that of the largest city in the area and a minimum of 25,000 inhabitants. The names of the individual urbanized areas indicate the central cities of the areas.

Urban fringe.—The urban fringe includes that part of the urbanized area which is outside the central city or cities. The following types of areas are embraced if they are contiguous to the central city or cities or if they are contiguous to any area already included in the urban fringe:

1. Incorporated places with 2,500 inhabitants or more in 1940 or at a subsequent special census conducted prior to 1950.
2. Incorporated places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants containing an area with a concentration of 100 dwelling units or more with a density in this concentration of 500 units or more per square mile. This density represents approximately 2,000 persons per square mile and normally is the minimum found associated with a closely spaced street pattern.
3. Unincorporated territory with at least 500 dwelling units per square mile.
4. Territory devoted to commercial, industrial, transportation, recreational, and other purposes functionally related to the central city.

Also included are outlying noncontiguous areas with the required dwelling unit density located within 1½ miles of the main contiguous urbanized part, measured along the shortest connecting highway, and other outlying areas within one-half mile of such noncontiguous areas which meet the minimum residential density rule.

<sup>1</sup> According to the new urban definition, the urban population comprises persons residing in urban territory but not necessarily in an urban place, which is defined as an incorporated place of 2,500 or more, or an unincorporated place of 2,500 or more located outside an urbanized area. Under the old definition, incorporated places of 2,500 or more and places urban under special rule are classified as urban places.

["Uninc." designates an unincorporated place. Minor civil division figures for 1930 do not necessarily add to county totals because of reorganization of minor civil divisions. Figures for 1940 and 1930 not available for unincorporated places unless given. Blank for any other area indicates no population was returned in given year. Minor civil divisions for which no population has been reported at each of last 3 censuses are not shown. Boundary changes between 1940 and 1930 given in footnotes; for changes between 1930 and 1940 see reports of Sixteenth Census (1940), Population, Vol. I, pp. 453-456. Total population of a place located within 2 or more minor civil divisions appears in table 7]
